Organisations are at a heightened risk of cyber attack

With the ongoing situation in Ukraine, now more than ever, we must be cyber aware and resilient and contribute to our national security.

Governments, defence, and security experts have warned for weeks that Britain, the US and the EU should brace for a wave of crippling cyber-attacks. In the UK, the Home Office, GCHQ, and the National Cyber Security Centre have all issued warnings and guidance to businesses to "bolster their online defences." Furthermore, US President Joe Biden warned the United States of the risks posed by cyber-attacks and that they would be "consequential" and were "one of the tools [Putin] is most likely to use." He urged business leaders to strengthen their companies' defence systems immediately as a cyberwar was "coming."

Please read the full article to understand why the conflict between Russia and Ukraine could result in cyber-attacks and what organisations can do to protect themselves here.

Marinas become a hotspot for cybercriminals

Unfortunately, no industry can avoid cyber-attacks, and recently another member of our maritime community revealed cybercriminals had targeted them.

On this occasion, cybercriminals attempted a hack of a superyacht network whilst it was in for re-fit. News reports also state that the superyacht sustained a phishing attack in the marina.

The superyacht and maritime industry are a hot target for cybercrime with the high net worth of the vessels, assets, and people aboard them and the available data and information.

Do you need a 360 audit of your cybersecurity? Not only for internal IT infrastructure but also employees, processes, and protocols?

The targeted client is now working with CSS Platinum, and a security audit has now been conducted; this one-day audit provided a complete security analysis of technologies and policies in place with triaged recommendations of areas to address. More details on the Audit in the feature below.
